Hurry up, George, we are going to be late for the our high school reunion.

GEORGE

Yeah, yeah, it's only been a short 20 years. They can wait a little bit longer to see me, ha ha.

ALLISON

They will take one look at you and think it's been 50 years.

GEORGE

Oh, Allison, help me get this tie on straight. I must look my best and this is only my dress rehearsal.

ALLISON

Well, if you think that I will help straighten your tie so you can impress Mary Jane, you have another thing coming.

GEORGE

There you go again. Are you still jealous of her?

ALLISON

Yea, I am jealous alright. I am so jealous that she was smarter than me.

GEORGE

What is that supposed to mean, sweetheart?

ALLISON

Never mind! Just get over here so I can help you with that tie. No reason to have a crooked one and embarrass me in front of all our old friends. Now maybe you should be able to do this someday yourself with enough practice.

GEORGE

Who is that knocking at our door?

ALLISON

Well, if you would answer the door maybe then you will find out.

GEORGE

Oh, hi, Billy Boy, don't you look nice.

BILLY

I went all out, George, just to make myself look younger.

GEORGE

Hey, you do look younger. What is your secret?

BILLY

Well, this must be kept secret. I had a face lift.

ALLISON

You what? How could you, Billy?

BILLY

What's the big deal?

GEORGE

Go figure! Why, you're going to look younger than us.

ALLISON

Yea, you should be ashamed of yourself.

GEORGE

That is right, making your best friends look old.

ALLISON

Wait a minute, George! Speak for yourself.

BILLY

Okay guys, enough. I will go and have the treatment reversed.

GEORGE

You would do that for us?

ALLISON

You mean they can reverse it back to the old you?

BILLY

Yea, I will be back.

(Billy exits the door.)

ALLISON

Gee, George, we really put our foot in it. I feel bad now. But dang, he looks 10 years younger than us and we are all the same age.

GEORGE

Well, not to worry, let him do his thing. Just picture this, Allison, we both are walking down the red carpet at our old Alma-Marta and they announce “Here comes Allison & George, the ageless and most popular and good looking couple here tonight. Let’s welcome the best ever homecoming Queen and King.

ALLISON

Oh, George, you sure have a wild imagination. And since when were we the Queen & King?

GEORGE

You don’t remember? I sure do.

ALLISON

In your dreams maybe!

GEORGE

But Allison?

ALLISON

Not to change the subject but did you pack all your medicines?

GEORGE

No, and I plan on leaving them all here. Why tomorrow tonight I will be 18 again, ha ha.

ALLISON

George, you forgot one thing.

GEORGE

What is that, Sweetheart?

ALLISON

You may think you're 18 again but your body will say to you, "Help! Help!" Instead of turning into a pumpkin at midnight you will turn into a drug store.

GEORGE

There you go again, Allison, always thinking negative.

ALLISON

Well, tell me one thing positive and I will change my view.

GEORGE

I remember something so positive that it will make your head swim.

ALLISON

I'm listening!

GEORGE

Hold that thought for just one minute.

ALLISON

Well, your minute is up now, George.

GEORGE

Just remember dear that I choose you and not Mary Jane.

ALLISON

What does Mary Jane have to do with thinking positive?

GEORGE

Well, last I heard through the grapevine, well Mary Jane is---O- la- la.

ALLISON

I knew it, George, you still have a mad crush on her, now don't you?

GEORGE

Now, Allison---What do I have to do to prove my love for you?

(He tries to kiss her)

ALLISON

Don't touch me or I will get the old rolling pin out, and then you will be sorry.

GEORGE

Someone is at the door again.

(Knock, knock)

You get the door, and I'll get the phone (Phone rings. Allison leaves the room.)

(The door opens and in walks Billy again)

GEORGE

Hey, Billy, you did it, why you are old again.

BILLY

Yea, I know it and I don't like it.

GEORGE

How did you get old so fast, Billy? Why this morning you were 10 years younger.

BILLY

My beauty is not worth my friendship with you and Allison.

GEORGE

Okay, but we got problems.

BILLY

Now what?

GEORGE

Well, I made a smart remark about Mary Jane, and now Allison is real jealous. You need to do something, Billy.

BILLY

Well, I changed my looks, but I will be danged if I can change Mary Jane's looks.

GEORGE

Have you seen her in the last 20 years?

BILLY

I really don't think that Allison needs to worry.

GEORGE

Why do you say that?

BILLY

Well, last I heard her cute little figure disappeared.

GEORGE

How could it disappear?

BILLY

Well, it's like this, her body now has two more layers on it.

GEORGE

Layers of what?

BILLY

Do I have to spell it out for you?

GEORGE

No, but I think you're trying to tell me she is fat now.

BILLY

Hey dude, you finally hit the nail on the head.

(Allison walks in the room)

ALLISON

What nail? What head?

GEORGE

Just a funny story Billy was telling me.

ALLISON

I can tell when you two are up to no good. Look at you, Billy, why you are old again.

BILLY

Yea, anything for my two best friends.

GEORGE

How did you do it, Billy?

BILLY

Do what?

ALLISON

Yea, answer him. This morning you were young and tonight you are old.

BILLY

Okay, you guys got me. I had put on an old Halloween mask that is smooth as molasses. It made me look younger, huh? And you all believed me when I told you I had a facelift, ha ha.

ALLISON

You tricked us, Billy? That was not very nice.

GEORGE

Yea, Billy, next time let me in on your little tricks.

BILLY

Well, for your information I have a confession to make.

ALLISON

We are listening!

GEORGE

Yea, what is it, buddy?

BILLY

Well, I.. I..

GEORGE

Yea, you I, I what??

BILLY

I, well, I.. I, Sir.

GEORGE

What are you trying to say Billy?

BILLY

I joined the Navy.

ALLISON

You what?

GEORGE

How could you, Billy?

ALLISON

Yea, did you use that Halloween mask that you had on this morning to trick them into believing you were 20 years younger?

GEORGE

You're too old to join the Navy and when they find out, well you will be in lots of trouble.

BILLY

You guys do not understand. And if you would both be quiet for one minute I will explain.

ALLISON

We are waiting.

GEORGE

Yea, me too.

(Allison & George fold their arms and stare at Billy)

BILLY

Well, it's like this. I have found my father's old Navy uniform, and well, I want the girls to notice me. I will wear it to the reunion and they will flock to me like flies.

GEORGE

What made you think of that, Billy?

BILLY

Well, it was my back-up plan. You see when you and Allison were so upset with my new younger looking face, I wanted to do something else to attract woman at the reunion. I am just so tired of being alone and only having you two for back-up.

ALLISON

Oh, Billy, I am so sorry, that we got upset with you.

(She goes over and puts her arms around him)

GEORGE

That is right, Billy .

(He goes over and puts his arms around him also.)

BILLY

You guys are my Super Heros!

ALLISON

Aha, Billy, wait someone is at the door. Who can that be?

Answer it, George.

GEORGE

Okay,

(He opens the door. A beautiful slender lady is standing there in the doorway.)

GEORGE

Can I help you, Miss?

LADY

Yea, my name is Mary Jane, and I just got into town today. I lost the directions to the high school reunion that I am going to tomorrow night.

BILLY

You came to the right place, just follow me Mary Jane. Do you remember me? I am Billy.

(Billy walks out the door with the lady and continues talking to her as they exit the stage.)

ALLISON

Okay, George, you have a lot of explaining to do.

GEORGE

Who me? How was I to know that Mary Jane has an hourglass figure and o-la-la?

(Allison is now chasing George into the other room with a rolling pin.)
